This book is an outcome of the interest of my friends at Martin Chautari to bring together various articles which I had written during the past decade.

The work to develop this book began with the idea and encouragement from Pratyoush Onta, the convener of Martin Chautari. He also thoroughly read the whole manuscript and pointed out various corrections that were required. Harsha Maharjan and Kishor Pradhan searched for these articles in the journals where they were published and also collected a few directly from the publishers. Sharad Ghimire helped by going through the articles and correcting the maps, figures and other inconsistencies. He also read the Introduction, and provided suggestions for improvement. Kishor Pradhan designed the book. Bhaskar Gautam, Shekhar Parajulee, Seira Tamang and other friends of Chautari also helped in various ways to bring this book out.

Thanks are also due to Ian Harper who read the Introduction and provided valuable suggestions. The manuscript was checked by Gaurav Lamichhane, who pointed out various flaws and inaccuracies. At a later stage, Tom Robertson took interest in this book and thoroughly edited the Introduction. Tina Shrestha also read a part of the manuscript and provided useful suggestions. The interest and suggestions of these friends helped to bring the Introduction to its present shape. I am grateful to all of them. The final checking of the manuscript was done by Ramakanta Tiwari. He pointed out various inconsistencies and then helped to correct them. I am also thankful to him. I am solely responsible for whatever flaws and weaknesses that have remained in the book.

Publishers of the journals (Mandala Book Point, Center for Nepal and Asian Studies, and Nepal Center for Contemporary Studies) in which these articles were first published readily gave consent for their republication in this book. I thank them all.

Financial resource to publish this book came through a support provided to Martin Chautari by Norwegian Church Aid (NCA). I would also like to thank NCA for this support.
